Tagore was the first Asian to receive the Nobel Prize in 1913 and this year marks the centenary.

Join former Jain monk and editor-in-chief of Resurgence & Ecologist, Satish Kumar, as he gives a talk at The Nehru Centre on 30 May to mark the centenary of Tagore receiving the Nobel Prize.

Satish Kumar says: “Tagore transcended from divisions of nationality, race and religion and saw humanity as one and in harmony with the natural world. This talk will mark this important centenary and explore Tagore’s relevance to our time. At a time when humanity is fragmented and divided, we need the message of Tagore in our time – now, more than ever.”
