Contributors:

The COVER shows a meeting of the Kanshila village council. Photographer, TOM HANLEY discovered the Gramdan movement while on a 37-day tour of India. A few more of his many beautiful pictures were published in The Illustrated London News (21 Nov. 1970). Although the article there ends on a pessimistic note, Tom himself is not discouraged about Gramdan, saying "the gift of land from the rich to the poor (is) a philosophy so simple that it has confounded politicians of both left and right..."

LOU GLANDFIELD. Has been writing since he was 14. Published in "South West Review", "Genesis" and "Asses Jawbone". His prime concerns are composition and poetry, the repression of violence and the preservation of people and cultures which are dying and/or subject to genocide. His poem "Indian Woman" appeared in our last issue.

PETER KIDDLE. Born in 1944. Married and living in Devon in "an experiment in rural-reconstruction", teaching English and organising and promoting arts events. He has been writing for the past 4 years, mostly poetry concerned with his landscape and its history. Published in "Asses Jawbone", "Workshop", and "South West Review" and read in London and the South West. Would like to return to India and finish a book he is writing with his wife about the Green Man, but sees himself growing very old, quietly where he is, between the Moon and the Sea.

JOHN HAAG. Published: "The Mirrored Man" (poems — Reading University Press), "The Brine-Breather" (poems — KAYAK Press) "Atlantis on $5 a Day" (a novel — the Freehand Press). Also a book on wild mushrooms and a full-length children's book called "The Mope", to be published sometime in 1971. ("The best children's book since Lewis Carroll"). At present living in the USA.

MICHAEL NORTH was born in Surrey, is 24 and combines farming in Wales with the most careful surveillance of Resurgence subscriptions and accounts.

JAYAPRAKASH NARAYAN began his political career as an ardent Marxist. Later he joined the Praja Socialist Party and subsequently became its President, as well as being elected to the presidency of several of India's largest trade unions.

In 1954, he suddenly resigned all his offices and quit party politics to work in the Land Gift Movement begun by Vinoba Bhave. Despite the furore his decision caused at the time, he is today one of the most widely respected men in India and is currently President of the Association of Voluntary Agencies for Rural Development (AVARD). Several of his articles have been published in previous issues of Resurgence, the last in Jan/Feb, 1969.

RESURGENCE is published on the first day of January, March, May, July, September and November.
