

Resurgence

June 2018

Dear Resurgence & Ecologist readers,

Thousands of people have been readers of Resurgence – now Resurgence & Ecologist – since the magazine was launched in 1966. From the very beginning, we have highlighted issues of peace, the environment, social justice, the arts and spirituality, to the point that a Guardian article referred to us as “the spiritual and artistic flagship of the green movement.”

Today, our magazine is at the centre of the activities of The Resurgence Trust, an educational trust set up to further our work. Activities of the Trust also include publishing The Ecologist website, organising talks and conferences, hosting the annual Festival of Wellbeing and the Resurgence Summer camp, producing videos and podcasts, and other initiatives.

We are delighted to have Resurgence groups in Britain and around the world – they form an important part of our outreach work. Some groups meet to discuss the issues we write about in Resurgence & Ecologist, others organise local activities and talks. The groups provide a valuable opportunity for readers to come together, united by common interests; to share ideas, enjoy good food, take a walk together.

We'd like to build on the work our Readers' groups are doing. If you have activities you think we should be reporting on, or if you would like us to provide a speaker for a readers' event you are planning, please contact us.

Next year, we will be moving into new buildings – the Small School in Hartland, North Devon – where we plan to establish an educational, environmental and arts centre that will help to further our work. This is a great time to be involved with Resurgence – together we can widen our networks and reach more people with the important messages advocated by Resurgence.

With best wishes,

Greg Neale
Editor-in-Chief
